The Mössbauer spectrum of the copper protein azurin has been determined at room temperature with a copper-57 enriched protein sample. The spectrum is best explained by the presence of an effective hyperfine interaction of 0.3 +/- 0.1 millitesla and a quadrupole interaction of 0.15 +/- 0.1 millitesla. The two-state nature of the electronic transition of the copper(II) center is evidenced by the presence of a sharp initial (Cullis I) subspectrum and a broad late (Cullis II) subspectrum. The difference spectra of the transition I and transition II subspectra are featuresless. For transitions I a hyperfine magnetic field of about 0.3 T at the copper(II) and a quadrupole interaction of 1.1 millitesla are found. The corresponding parameters of the transition II subspectrum are 1.5 +/- 0.1 T and -0.1 +/- 0.1 millitesla, respectively. The quadrupole interaction seems to be close to the value of the copper(II) hyperfine interaction and, thus, the two parameters are similar. However, the magneticity value of the copper(II) ion is significantly smaller than 1.5 T, whereas the quadrupole interaction is close to 1.1 millitesla. This finding suggests that the three components of the ligand molecule are strongly coupled to the 1cb139a0ed
