1. Editing Shadows Shadows are created by adding a black area behind the area of an image that is in light. This allows the dark areas to stand out. A shadow should not be painted over the black part of an object. With a selection, the black part can be highlighted. The black area will automatically be created at the intersection between the two white areas (along the side and bottom of the selection). With a selection, the black part can be highlighted. The black area will automatically be created at the intersection between the two white areas (along the side and bottom of the selection). You can apply the same method to bring out more white part of a dark object.
2. Creating Transparent Brushes You can try using a brush to paint over a white and/or transparent area to create a different color. Be sure to use very soft or soft variations to create a dynamic look. You can also use this technique with gradients to make a soft transition. Open an image and create a new selection. Click the "Paint" tool on the toolbar and check "Make a New Fill". Click on the color picker to set the color and use the options "Opacity" and "Opacity percentage" to help create more of a smooth look. Create a new layer over the selection. Add a fill layer effect by clicking "+" on the right side of the panel and add "Gradient". Adjust the gradient "Spread". Close the box, select "Fill", set the contrast to "Lighten" and click "OK" to apply it. Add a drop shadow to the layer for more depth. You can use the options on the dialog box or the "Add a Drop Shadow" effect.
3. Easy Gradient Effects Gradients are effects that use the colors of an image to create a smooth transition from one color to another.

(February 3rd, 4:30 pm PST) you're not only competing for bragging rights about who was able to watch it in the most comfort during a blizzard, but the NFL is trying to get people to show more patriotism during the big game. But this is just more propaganda by a sports league that preys on anger and discontent. I'm voting against the NFL and I'm not going to complain about it, but I don't want to see it either. If I want to watch America's pastime, then I'll watch it at home. I'm not watching it in a stadium in front of a crowd of people who have been brainwashed by propaganda to be angry at their own country, my government and my religion. I doubt the Super Bowl will result in a significant amount of outbursts against the government or the religion, especially in light of the fact that the vast majority of people who watch the game are Patriot's anyway. That being said, I'm voting against the game because I'm not buying into anything the NFL tries to sell me. USA, USA, USA... There's a reason the National Anthem plays whenever the USA team scores a touchdown. It's because the USA is a powerful country and has the biggest military in the world. In case anyone was wondering, I'm
