Adobe RGB color space lets you create images in an Adobe RGB color space. This setting is useful for color-critical images, including digital images and graphics. The color space covers the colors you find on a monitor. If your monitor displays colors as other spaces, you may use the correct settings in Photoshop to accurately reproduce the colors. Adobe RGB is a color space that provides a broad range of colors. This color space mimics the colors on a monitor. What's New in the Adobe Photoshop CC 2015?

Q: How to find exact number of items in a group and then create a random number generator with the same distribution I would like to create a generator that generates 100 items from a set that was determined at the beginning and I want it to be that way. The set is something like that mySet = [1,3,4,5,7,2,6,8,9] So I want to create a random generator with those 100 items. I want the random generator to look something like that: Generate: 1 Generate: 2 Generate: 1 Generate: 2 etc. I have tried doing something with matplotlib but I just got stuck. This is what I tried doing with matplotlib: import random import numpy as np import matplotlib.pyplot as plt #First of all I have to take the group from the lists here #This is supposed to be the final result mySet = [1,3,4,5,7,2,6,8,9] #So these variables are just to get the groups from the lists nPor = 100 nMon = np.random.randint(len(mySet)) nVar = np.random.randint(len(mySet)) mySet = np.hstack((mySet,nMon,nVar)) #This is part of the actual thing i tried with matplotlib plt.hist(np.random.shuffle(mySet),100) plt.show() (As you can see the random number generation with my set is not working) After I generate the random number with nMon it would be easy to make it so it is the same as generating it without using random.shuffle EDIT: mySet = [] for num in range(100): mySet.append(random.randint(1,9)) print mySet [1, 3, 4, 5, 7, 2, 6, 8, 9] [2, 1, 3, 4, 5, 7, 2, 6, 8] [0, 0, 3, 0, 0, 0, 0, 1, 2] [3, 2, 0, 0, 0, 4, 1,
