Two innovative initiatives at the University of Illinois aimed at increasing the number of minority students in the School of Engineering will be presented this year at the annual National Minority Engineering Week. One program, known as "Go Big in Engineering", is a one-time $2 million investment in eight Illinois engineering programs designed to bring the enrollment numbers of African-American and Latino students in those programs to levels similar to the university's overall enrollment. The other, the National Science Foundation-funded Minority-Empowered Research Partnership program, is a $3 million investment in eight Illinois engineering programs designed to increase the number of doctoral degrees granted by the program. Details of the programs will be announced by Dr. David Guth, vice chancellor and dean of the School of Engineering, at a press conference Thursday in Urbana. Q: What happens if you order a meal at the same time the preceding meal was delivered? I was told that if a guest orders a meal at the same time the previous one was delivered, the last meal will not be delivered until the guest's meal is delivered. Is that true? A: There is no set time to wait, but according to the book "I Celebrate being a Poor Christian" published by the Church of the Visible Word: If you go to the table and sit down and order before the food is ready, there may be a delay in the delivery of your food. The author of this book also points to a book called "The Redeemer's Table" that states: If you are a little late at the table ordering, for example you order between 10 and 15 minutes before the food is ready to be served, there will be a short delay of maybe a few minutes to get your food. As far as I know, the word "delivery" here means the meal is supposed to be there at the time you sit down to eat. If you order a dish from a counter where the food is to be assembled from multiple
