A 50-year-old woman was referred to our department complaining of general fatigue in March, 1999. Radiologically, a left mass of 13 cm was detected in her left lung. She had been treated with several courses of radiation therapy and chemotherapy after the initial diagnosis. After the first recurrence, she underwent surgical resection of the recurrent lesion in April, 2001. Pathologically, the lesion showed a solid and spindle-shaped cell tumor with clear cell change. In March, 2002, she suffered from dyspnea and coughing. Both computed tomography and magnetic resonance imaging revealed recurrence at the same site as the previous resection. Her tumor was positive for carcinoembryonic antigen and cytokeratin 7. We resected this tumor in April, 2002. The pathological diagnosis was consistent with that of the previous resection. Gemcitabine was administered as the first-line chemotherapeutic agent.Q: Update QProgressDialog How to update QProgressDialog with single progress bar value?
