Some of the applets of the modern operating systems, like the computer mouse, show you an animated picture while you use them. This can be very helpful in order to recall some parts of the experience, but can also create a distraction, as you keep your eyes on the computer screen. This can be a very serious problem, since some experts say that computer games and applications which use this kind of animation can cause damage to your visual capacity, and speed-readers like you are most likely already victims of this.
