Seagram Building, Cleveland The Seagram Building was a skyscraper located in downtown Cleveland,

Ohio, United States.
Standing nearly, it was the tallest building in Cleveland until the construction of Cleveland City Hall. It is located on the corner of Superior Avenue and East 9th Street. The Seagram Building was named the headquarters of the Seagram Company in 1926, and it became the United States headquarters of the company from 1943 to 1990. The building was designed by architects

Warren and Wetmore, who were awarded the New York City Tribune Medal for best architectural design in 1922 for the design. The building was located in one of the most desirable districts of Cleveland at the time of its construction. The Seagram Building was sold to the Bank of New York, and for many years, it housed the main offices of the bank. In 1991, the Cleveland Trust Company, successor to the Bank of New York, sold the building to the Cleveland-Marshall College of Law, which had recently moved into its new branch campus on East 9th Street. The building has undergone many renovations, the most significant of which was a $64 million renovation in 2001–2002. The building was extensively damaged by a fire on December 30, 2017, which caused the collapse of a section

---
