E. Penn Knowles, a native of New York, was the third master of the Thimble Islands Light and Keeper of the Lighthouse during a 12-year period. Penn Knowles took over the Thimble Islands Station on July 13, 1948 from Henry F. Kleinberg who was suffering from a serious illness. Knowles was a retired captain from the U. S. Coast

Guard. He received orders to take over the station from the commanding officer at the time, Charles L. Reed, who was on vacation. In 1950, the station was included in a plan to build a new Thimble Islands Lighthouse at a cost of $5.6 million, which would serve as a response to the flood of excess gravel being dumped on and around the base of the island. However, due to reduced budgets, such a project could not be implemented. After being with the Coast Guard for 12 years, Penn Knowles retired at the age of 58. He was replaced on the Thimble Islands Station by Alfred S. Wood, who remained there until 1960. References
