Max Payne 3 Offline.Q: Change Python Package Name but Update Version I recently got a job in a more sort of 'senior' role. The package I have written for my company has the same name as the package I wrote for my current company. This doesn't normally cause a problem for me but I suspect it's going to cause some trouble. Obviously the code has to be refactored to get it into the latest version of Python and I want to be able to use the new version of Python but I don't want to have to change the package name also. My current package structure is as follows: if __name__ == '__main__': from yolo import app Is there a way that I can essentially 'alias' this package so I can refactor it and use the new version of Python and make the sys.version say that I'm using 2.7.9. On one hand I'd like to think that this 3da54e8ca3
