Yankees owner Hal Steinbrenner reacts to MLBPA voting on salary arbitration for players Aug 15 (Reuters) - New York Yankees owner Hal Steinbrenner said on Monday he did not object to MLB players union officials voting to allow salary arbitration for the first time since 1972 and expressed confidence that baseball's owners would restore full free agency. "I don't have a problem with it," Steinbrenner said in a conference call with reporters in response to a question on MLB players filing salaries of nearly $9 billion. "It's just the way that the collective bargaining agreement was structured and put in place. "I'm not taking a position and would not have a problem with it. We take ownership of the game just like MLB does. I have no objection to it or belief that we won't have a dispute with the players that they would call it a strike. We've been in those situations before." (Reporting by Steve Ginsburg; Editing by Chizu Nomiyama)

Late last week, when the city council unanimously voted to approve a tax on sugary drinks, residents of Chattanooga were already well aware of how this conflict was going to play out. Be the first to know. For months, the controversy over a penny per ounce tax on sugary drinks has been building. And finally, on Wednesday, city council members voted 7-1 to approve a tax on sugary drinks at places that sell 12 oz. or more of drinks on their premises. The tax will raise revenue for the city's public health and well-being district. The tax, which will take effect on January 1, 2015, will increase the cost of a 12-ounce soda or sports drink by 25 cents. That represents a 7 percent increase, or slightly higher, if you live in Chattanooga than the rates of the last penny per ounce tax in 2011, which applied only to the city.

Councilmen Fred Richardson, Jeff Riggs and Jim Coppinger voted against the new tax, which was approved with no public comments about the sugary drink industry; in fact, no official public testimony was presented at all. In his dissent, Richardson said he thought the goal of taxing sugary drinks was good. He also had a few things to say about soda. "I still drink Coca-Cola because of the commercials," he said. "Sodas are OK. But I don't think it's fair for the city to have an advantage over

There are several methods for displaying a stereoscopic image to a viewer. One of the methods is a passive method in which the viewer views a stereoscopic image, and other of the methods is an active method in which the viewer views a stereoscopic image by a special stereoscopic image display device. In general, the passive method is widely used. Thus, the viewer views the stereoscopic image displayed by a passive method and hence enjoys viewing a three-dimensional image. The viewer, however, is required to wear a special pair of eyeglasses or a special polarization eyeglasses to view the stereoscopic image displayed by the passive method. Thus, the passive method has various disadvantages. In particular, it is necessary to remember the special equipment and the special technique for viewing the stereoscopic image. Further, for viewing the stereoscopic image, the viewer is required to wear the special eyeglasses. Thus, the viewer may feel a fatigue to wear the special eyeglasses. On the other hand, the active method is relatively new. As the active method, there are various methods, such as a polarized eyeglasses method, a parallax barrier method, a lenticular lens method, a time division-multiplexing method, a shutter eyeglasses method, and the like. Thus, the active method has various merits. For example, in the active method

System Requirements For Adobe Photoshop CS3:

- JavaScript disabled - Needs a physical keyboard - The machine needs to be able to play video games at normal speed The only game that will not require keyboard controls is the game Paintball. If you ever played it, you would know that the game is extremely simple. The difficulty level is on a scale of 1-5. I rated it at a 1 because it was just a game for kids who were about 2 years old. It was playable even with keyboard controls. All of these games can be played with a controller, however, controller
