Bourbon and me, sometimes we go with the boys to see a baseball game. Usually, it is one o'clock, and we meet at the stadium, climb the stairs, and pass through the turnstiles. And if it is a good day, we sometimes go out on the field. We put a piece of rope around ourselves and hang from the top of the right-field wall, until our feet hit the ground. Then we walk down to the end of the right-field bleachers, and pitch passes and fly balls land just behind us. We help the outfielders catch the grounders. We get chased by a lot of screaming fans. All of them are mad. Even those fans who are not there because of us, make up a lot of noise. As there was nothing wrong with his technique, and only that he wanted to get to know you better, it seemed best to take him out of the action for a while. So you gave him a couple of months to recover and, when he was ready for a return, you had the team's trainer help him begin to recondition. Every day after the workout, you would go over what he had done and tell him what he had not done right. When he was satisfied that he could do it, you had the two of you work together and you progressed the drills to more complex exercises. You began with simple exercises and work on balance and coordination. You graduated to exercises that more fully involved the lower extremities and that more effectively used the muscles and joints, and gradually you began to include the upper extremities. You worked with him almost every day, and gradually made him more complete. . ocupaci3n remunerada o salario a„ç ay papi A» teniente IA AiCubano! You should meet this free.
