Category:Living people Category:Film producers from Hyderabad, IndiaQ: How can I mix file upload and external database in Symfony2/Doctrine2? I'm having a bad time thinking of a good solution for mixing a file upload form with a MySQL/Doctrine2 database. I'm quite new to Symfony2 and I hope someone could shine some light on the matter. Say, I have a form with a file upload field, and I like to store it at the base of my project in a SQLite database. Here's what I did so far: file formType: ->add('file', 'file', array('label' => 'File','required' => false)) file controller: $form = $this->createFormBuilder()->add('file', 'file', array('label' => 'File','required' => false))->add('save','submit')->getForm(); $form->handleRequest($request); if ($form->isSubmitted() && $form->isValid()) { // do stuff... $em = $this->getDoctrine()->getManager(); $entity = new MyEntity(); $em->persist($entity); $em->flush(); } $em = $this->getDoctrine()->getManager(); $entity = new MyEntity(); $em->persist($entity); $em->flush(); By checking (trying to) everything, I'm supposed to get that the file is posted, and that the form is valid. The form and the database are correctly updated when the entity gets saved. My trouble comes here: while the fields of the form are updating perfectly (e.g., the title or the image) the entity is not having its id updated at all. I'm doing something wrong with Symfony2's lifecycle callbacks, but I can't see what. If you have any tip for me (a link to some documentation or whatever), I would appreciate it. A bonus would be to have the created entity in my database, as the one I create is an "old one" and the entity I get from the form is an updated one
