I need to make sure that all these objects have their memory released at some point, because later on I might want to set a new object as a delegate to this class, but it must point to the old object. So this is what I have done: I got a reference to the old object, and set a new object. When the old object gets deallocated, I set the new object back to the old one. It looks a bit like this:

class Base { private Foo oldFoo; public Base() { oldFoo = new Foo(); //Init objects } ~Base() { oldFoo = new Foo(); } } //There is also a class that inherits from Base: class Foo : Base { }

 From what I see from the answers to this question, it is okay to set the same object back to another like this, however, I am not sure if this would work with garbage collection, because this might happen when another object
