How To Install Labmaster Serial Key Full Version 2020 .Kia tops VTI sales charts in July Kia drivers have been the big winners this year in every category of New Zealand's automotive sales. The Korean manufacturer has claimed three of the top-selling-vehicle spots in July according to the latest Kia Motors data. Pricing is the biggest factor in driving sales and the biggest winner in July was Kia's model-line-leading Auris model, selling a respectable 15.4 per cent more than its closest rival, the Tesla Model S. The Kia Fabia followed with a 9 per cent rise, while the Kia Sportage picked up 8.8 per cent. The Kia Sportage has been one of the fastest-growing vehicles in New Zealand in recent years, with the model - which was previously known as the Ioniq in overseas markets - rising from third-last to second place this month. The Kia Carens rose another 1.4 per cent to claim fourth place, while the Kia Rio moved up one spot to finish in fifth. Kia sold fewer cars in July than in June, but it still outsold the other manufacturers combined, up 2.5 per cent to 17,622. That makes Kia the largest selling manufacturer for the month. When comparing Kia figures for the first half of the year to 2017 results, sales are up by almost 15 per cent. The Hyundai brand has also had a good run in July, improving 11.3 per cent on a year ago. Its new Tucson model was the year's fastest-selling vehicle, moving out of the brand's previous number three spot in just four months. The fourth-placed Santa Fe shot up 25.2 per cent. Albany-based Kia Motors had a good month in New Zealand, while rival Toyota and its Invercargill plant were relatively quiet. The manufacturer's sales have been significantly boosted by the opening of the Altona assembly plant in February 2018. Auckland was the second largest market for Kia in 2017, while the In
