to be applied to a source electrode and a gate electrode through a parasitic capacitor because the source electrode and gate electrode are close to the drain electrode. Therefore, since the parasitic capacitor reduces the high voltage applied to the drain electrode, the ON current of the TFT may decrease. Furthermore, in the interphase having a low thickness, an electric field applied between the first gate electrode and the first source electrode may be increased. Therefore, since a decrease of the ON current of the TFT and an increase of the OFF current of the TFT may occur due to a shift of a threshold voltage, it is desired to provide a semiconductor thin film transistor and method of fabricating the same that maximizes the ON current./*

The present invention relates to a method for mounting a component of a vapor-permeable wall on a structure, a structure which includes the component and to the component mounted on the structure. Constructional details of enclosures such as workshops, distribution booths, factory buildings, garment finishing facilities, buildings with paper recycling machinery and the like require a wall structure made gas-impermeable. Such walls are usually composed of several layers or parts, in which the individual layers or parts are mated on a construction site. After the walls have been constructed, add-on components, such as soundproofing mats and soundproofing panels can be added to them. The manufacture and construction of the individual wall layers or parts usually takes place at remote locations separated by distances of several km. Often, these components are integrated into the manufacturing and planning process of the building itself, e.g. in the fabrication of carpets and others, but in some cases the components are not manufactured or installed until the construction of the walls is finished. This often means that the walls cannot be tested and/or certified with regard to their acoustic tightness until all components have been installed. This is time-consuming and costly. There are several different methods known for constructing walls,
